

Explanatory Essay How To Join A Sorority

Different Colleges and University have differing engagement levels with the Greek life groups. Some have 0% engagement. The first step into joining a sorority group is to ensure that, the school one attends to have the Greek life groups.

Secondly, one should determine when the recruitment date is by accessing their offices or checking online. Do some thorough research about the sorority group before joining. The information is readily available in the sorority group websites. This way, one can be in a position to determine whether they want to associate with the group or not ("Sorority Process?").

The next step is to sign up for recruitment. This step involves payment of a non-refundable registration fee. Furthermore, the freshman is given a guide to help her throughout the hiring process. To avoid being locked out, one should apply much earlier in advance. One is more likely to get a chance if their name is near the top of the list. Include as much information as possible on the registration sheets. This is to prevent any collision between the group's schedule and that of the other clubs that one may have joined in the past. Some other information such as regarding academics should also be included to help the group determine whether they want to recruit the person or not ("Sorority Process?").

Attend the various events held by the sororities before the formal recruitment time. These functions allow the members to meet and engage the potential recruits of their groups. One should attend as many sorority groups event as possible to ensure that they make the right choice. Different sororities have different priorities, and one should join the one that they feel matches their desires the most. The dress code is quite important in the sororities events. Therefore one should remember to dress appropriately for each event by getting help from the guide or enquiring from the sorority group offices. During the process, one should meet as many sorority sisters as possible, to get to know them and learn their likes and dislikes. If their character does not match with the character one regard highly, one should avoid joining that particular sorority group. Gather as much information as possible especially concerning the cost incurred. Finally, a list of the favorite sororities is made ("The Steps To Joining A Sorority Or Fraternity. Bid Day Etc Etc.").

One should assess the various invitations that they may have received from various sororities. Some of these invitations may not have aligned with the values, and their activities may not have been attractive to the freshman. In this case, avoid choosing such groups. After this, the member enters a 4-8 week pledging period where they engage in the various activities in the group. In this period, the veterans determine whether the new sister is capable of carrying out and upholding their values and culture. On passing the sorority pledge, the person becomes a full member of the sorority group. Membership too comes at a cost as one have to maintain a particular grade throughout their life at school ("The Steps To Joining A Sorority Or Fraternity. Bid Day Etc.").

Joining a sorority or a fraternity group is not usually easy. One must be ready to uphold the values and the culture of the chosen group. Above all, one should be well informed of the pros and cons of becoming a member of the sorority or fraternity group.
