College Admission Essay

Winston Churchill famously stated, "success is not final, failure is not fatal: it is the courage to continue that counts". Indeed, these words encapsulate my objectives in life. I have always put in effort even when I am not doing my best. Despite the setbacks that I have faced, I have always emerged victorious and gained valuable lessons. Ever since I was young, I have always wanted to join the University of Southern California. As such, all my efforts in elementary school and high school have always been geared towards helping me achieve my goal.

Currently, I am attending Glendale Community college, where I am pursuing General Education courses. My time at the institution has been positive as my grades as a student have improved. Moreover, it has helped me grow both in character and academically. However, for my undergraduate degree program, I believe that the University of Southern California is best suited to help me achieve my goals in life. Therefore, I am looking to transfer my credits to the University of California, which I consider to be one of the best institutions in the country. I am looking to join University of California's Marshall School of Business and pursue a degree in business management. The institution has some of the minds in the country and I would relish the opportunity of learning alongside and from some of the best.

One of the institution's core values is centered around developing student leadership by providing a holistic environment suited for learning and other activities. As such, I believe that the University of Southern California has an environment whereby I can develop my leadership, critical thinking, and interpersonal skills. These skills are essential in the world of management. In the future, I hope to become the president of Golden Boy Promotions, a boxing promotional firm. If granted the opportunity to join the University of California, I will be one step away from achieving my life's goals.
