

Dear Sir or Madam,

I have been working as a part of an editorial team for many years. I enjoy my work, and I was honored to be a part of a great team. I have only good things to say about my managers. In fact, it was them that inspired me to try and create something close to what we had going on. And I strongly believe that they have managed to pass enough wisdom for me to be able to recreate those results.

I am a skilled writer specializing in technical and marketing writing. I have also briefly worked as a journalist and could transfer my experience to adapt to the type of tasks you offer. I am highly organized, meticulous and have years of editorial experience.

Even though my official job description didn't involve any managerial responsibilities, I was frequently trusted with such tasks as one of the team's most senior and reliable members. As such, I am more than familiar with the intricacies of team management. This makes me a perfect fit for the position you are looking to fill.

I have been looking for a company to join for some time now. And it's your particular startup that grabbed my attention due to its progressive format. So I empathize with your resolve to revolutionize the niche and have seen enough of how it works from the inside to be able to make some suggestions and do some experiments.

My approach to work and management is constant growth, adaptation, and innovation. And I'm very excited to find a company that shares those same values. I feel like we fit each other perfectly and could benefit greatly from this partnership.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I am looking forward to your reply.

Regards,
